The Iowa Psychiatric Society
a district branch of the American Psychiatric Society

October 5, 2018
8AM - 5PM
Radisson Hotel, Coralville

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of the conference, the learner should be able to:

- Recognize appropriate and safe use of narcotic pain medication within the context of behavioral health care
- Talk with patients about the medical indications for marijuana and how recent legislation impacts its use in mental health treatment
- Diagnose autism in adults and develop behavioral plan for disruptive behaviors
- Prescribe new psychotropic treatments for tardive dyskinesia and treatment of parkinson's psychosis
- Use appropriate terminology with patients on the gender/sexuality continuum and understand the impact of gender identity and sexuality on mental health
- Discuss risks and benefits of psychotropic medications with patients who are or may become pregnant or decide to breastfeed

INTENDED AUDIENCE

The target audience includes physicians (psychiatrists, family medicine), mid-level providers (physician assistants and nurse practitioners), psychologists, social workers and psychiatric nurses. The course is designed to increase provider's ability to care for a variety of psychiatric conditions that may be complicated by environmental or medical conditions using the latest advances in medicine.

PURPOSE

Changes in legislation and societal attitudes have directly impacted the care of patients with mental illness. Behavioral health providers are expected to meet the mental health needs of a diverse and evolving patient population. Whether it be the increased awareness of Autism or the recognition that the LGBTQ community have specialized needs, psychiatric providers are often impacted. As drugs, such as ketamine and marijuana, receive indications for psychiatric illnesses, mental health providers are expected to know how to counsel patients and use these substances appropriately. This conference intends to provide the latest information on new and novel treatments and develop a better understanding of our patients' needs.
